Neshkinukat

August 25, 2017 to January 5, 2018

This unique and diverse exhibit of Native art explores the idea of our interrelationship with the four "relatives" of our human peoples: the Stone People, the Plant People, the Animal People and the Spirit World. Neshkinukat in Luiseno means "One who has Relatives." In Lakota the meaning is "We are All Related." Through the art we can see the ways we are interconnected and that spirit resides in all. A variety of mediums will be displayed: ceramics, gourd art, paintings, photographs and mixed media. A reception celebrating the opening of the exhibit will take place on August 30 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

LOCAL

September 4, 2017 to January 5, 2018

Inspiration can come in many forms including a location, town, city or place. Here in Southern California, people take pride in where they are from and their neighborhoods. Whether it's the skate park down the street, a favorite taco spot, or a location for solitude, people identify with that location and know they are not home until they are there. This exhibit presents diverse artistic interpretations of local space and inspires artists to produce a wide range of works.
